Profile

Stuart is motivated, capable, and a committed professional, with outstanding interpersonal skills, articulate and a fast learner. He prides himself on being able to manage uncertainty and bring originality and innovation when tackling and solving novel problems. He is a passionate and experienced Occupational Therapist and Clinical Case Manager who has worked successfully with adults and children who have experienced life changing injury, including brain injuries, spinal injuries, and complex orthopaedic/polytrauma injuries.

Stuart has worked in health and social care for over 20 years. He has worked closely with clients and families across a wide range of services. As a case manager Stuart works with individuals who have experienced a life-changing injury by coordinating care and rehabilitation that enables them to live as independently as possible. He uses person-centred goals and a range of clinical outcome measures to enable his clients, their families, and relevant parties to see progress in real time and to shape their rehabilitation programme.

Stuart's clinical background has influenced his approach to case management, which is focused on working in partnership with his clients on what's important to them. In this context, quality of life through engagement in meaningful occupations is valued as the primary therapeutic agent as well as the goal of rehabilitation.

Stuart has a sound operational and demonstrable leadership background in health and social care, with an ability to consider high-level strategic thinking with detailed operational awareness. He can translate policy and concepts into practice as well as retrieve, interpret, and utilise data (qualitative and quantitative) to influence his practice and write comprehensive reports.

He is an experienced trainer and educator with sound clinical skills, able to create environments in which others flourish.

Testimonial

"From the beginning of my time having Stuart as my case manager I have found him to be both professional and efficient in his role with the injury I sustained. Stuart has not only been knowledgeable in his field, but also very friendly and approachable, in times when I have had a lot of worry and stress for what the future may hold. Stuart has been fantastic, not only offering support, but knowing exactly which experts in their relevant fields can help me and putting me in contact with said healthcare professionals, arranging all of this for me and getting the funding for whoever it was best for me to see at any specific time. Whilst this has been a very challenging period of my life, Stuart has always made me comfortable and aware that he is only a phone call or message away should I need to reach out for his assistance with anything."
