Profile

Since 2019, Chris has worked in brain injury case management, supporting a diverse caseload of clients with varied and complex needs. He has a strong track record of achieving positive outcomes for clients previously considered highly challenging or disengaged by other professionals.

Chris's practice is grounded in the development of authentic, trust based connections, particularly in situations where previous interventions have been unsuccessful. He specialises in creating strategies that unlock potential and restore a sense of purpose for each client.

Chris has consistently demonstrated the ability to transform complex and challenging cases into measurable improvements in function, independence and quality of life.

Chris regards his role as a privilege and is committed to supporting clients through transformative journeys, contributing to sustained and positive change in their lives.

Testimonial

"Chris is extremely competent and goes above and beyond for his clients. He is prompt with his responses and thinks outside of the box when overcoming challenges for his clients. Chris has a great personality and adapts well to all situations. My client has recently lost his wife, and Chris helped the client (and their wider family) through this very difficult time (including help with funeral arrangements) showing compassion to the family and also commitment to his role as case manager."
